Married, not in the Church
Civil unions are not considered valid marriages in the Catholic Church; the Church desires for you to be in a full and true marriage for the benefit of both souls. As such, there is a process called a convalidation, which is very similar to a normal church wedding.
I need information on convalidation: <input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
Investigation of Nullity
Whether you are divorced or remarried, the Church offers to all Christians the opportunity to ask for an investigation into the nullity of the previous marriage(s). In the Archdiocese of Oklahoma City, the cost of the investigation has been assumed by the Church. This process has been for many a great moment of healing.
Where are you at in the nullity process?

Adult children not in school and other adults living in the home should register separately. If you need more "child" space, please attach on a separate piece of paper.
